agreements on health worker migration and mobility: maximizing health system benefits and safeguarding health workforce rights and welfare through fair and ethical international recruitment World Health Organization, 2024-03-14 International migration and mobility of health workers is increasing in volume and complexity. If not adequately managed, migration of health workers from low and middle income countries can exacerbate shortages and can weaken health systems in these countries and widen inequities. Among various pathways for movement of health workers, government to government agreements hold important potential to ensure that health workers and the health systems of participating countries benefit from health worker migration and mobility. This guidance is a tool for improving the capacity of state actors involved in the development, negotiation, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of agreements related to international health worker migration and mobility, keeping health system priorities at the fore in alignment with the provisions of the WHO Global Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel. Code of Federal
