Coffee Brewing Handbook:

The Coffee Brewing Handbook Ted R. Lingle, Specialty Coffee Association of America, 1996-01-01 The Water Quality Handbook David Beeman, Paul Songer, Ted Lingle, 2011-08-16

When coffee professionals discuss the process of brewing coffee the merits of certain key variables bean roast grind brew temperature and brewer are always touched upon. Unfortunately one of the most important variables water is often left out of that discussion. Given that a cup of coffee is made up of 98.5% of water and typically 95% of the espresso beverage it is important to understand that water is an essential variable and the quality of this variable is even more important. Water used for brewing coffee must meet the high standards required for proper extraction of the flavors and aromas inherent in a Golden Cup the Specialty Coffee Association of America's certification of high quality freshly brewed coffee.
