Researching Creative Learning Pat Thomson, Julian Sefton-Green, 2010-11-05 It is a common ambition in society and government to make young people more creative These aspirations are motivated by two key concerns to make experience at school more exciting relevant challenging and dynamic and to ensure that young people are able and fit to leave education and contribute to the creative economy that will underpin growth in the twenty first century Transforming these common aspirations into informed practice is not easy It can mean making many changes turning classrooms into more exciting experiences introducing more thoughtful challenges into the curriculum making teachers into different kinds of instructors finding more authentic assessment processes putting young people's voices at the heart of learning There are programmes projects and initiatives that have consistently attempted to offer such change and transformation The UK programme Creative Partnerships is the largest of these but there are significant initiatives in many other parts of the world today including France Norway Canada and the United States This book not only draws on this body of expertise but also consolidates it making it the first methodological text exploring creativity Creative teaching and learning is often used as a site for research and action research and this volume is intended to act as a textbook for this range of courses and initiatives The book will be a key text for research in creative teaching and learning and is specifically directed at ITE CPD Masters and doctoral students
