1: Speech by Kaiser Wilhelm II on German Militarism

Date: January 1, 1907

"The strength of a nation is not measured by its words, but by its steel. Germany has risen from the shadows of division to become a mighty empire, and it is our duty to ensure our rightful place among the great powers. Look to Britain—they rule the seas. Look to France—they dream of revenge. Look to Russia—they expand ever eastward. Shall we stand idle while others dictate the fate of Europe? No! We must arm ourselves, strengthen our fleet, and ensure that no nation dares challenge the might of the German Reich. To our people, I say: honor, duty, and sacrifice will lead us to greatness. To our soldiers, I say: prepare for the day when the Fatherland may call upon you to defend our destiny. The world does not favor the weak, and we shall not be weak. Germany must be respected, and if respect is not given, then it must be taken. Our fleet will grow, our army will be unmatched, and when the moment arrives, Germany shall claim its rightful place among the rulers of Europe. This is not a call for war, but a call for preparedness. Strength ensures peace; weakness invites ruin. Let our enemies know—we will not be left behind, and we will not be dictated to. The German people demand recognition, and we shall have it, whether by diplomacy or by force."

- How does Kaiser Wilhelm II justify Germany's military expansion?
- How might this speech contribute to the growing tensions in Europe prior to World War I?

"Once again, the German Empire has launched another wave of battleships to challenge our Royal Navy. The question now is clear: shall we surrender our dominance of the seas, or shall we meet this challenge with an even greater display of naval power? For centuries, Britain has ruled the oceans, securing trade, protecting our colonies, and defending our homeland. This is not simply a matter of national pride but of survival. If Germany believes it can intimidate us with its growing fleet, it has gravely miscalculated. The British people must rally to ensure that our navy remains unchallenged. Let us not forget the lessons of history—control of the seas means control of the
