

Comparison between two films Essay Example

In this essay I am going to present a comparative analysis of how an iconic central character is represented in both 'The Queen' and 'Batman Begins'. Despite the fact that this character is present in both materials, there are different techniques used to portray these characters in a certain way. Since the genre and audience is different between the two films, the mise-en-scene varies to create the required effect. In 'the Queen', the mise-en-scene is used to create the impression that the royal family is quite distant from the realities of normal life, and that they are extremely privileged. In contrast to this, 'Batman Begins' uses techniques to show that the main setting, the city of Gotham, is a dishonest and sinister place.

Seeing that 'Batman Begins' is aimed at a younger audience, it is unable to show a lot of violence. Therefore non-diegetic sound is used to convey a sense of aggression and brutality. 'The Queen' is composed of predominantly diegetic sound. This presents more a documentary or biography-esque type film, suggesting that what you see in the film is a true representation of the royal family. Since there is dialogue throughout the majority of the film, the characters emotions are represented by the dialogue, so there is no need to expose these through the use of non-diegetic sound. Music is used throughout the whole of 'Batman Begins', to create a more dramatic feel, as well as emphasising certain parts of the film.

This is most common when batman appears, which creates the impression that he is a powerful heroic character, in contrast to when his alter-ego, Bruce Wayne, is on screen. The orchestral and deep percussion music helps to portray a sense of menace and threat. Unlike 'Batman Begins', 'the Queen' rarely has music, except to emphasise certain parts of the film or emotions. This is usually when there is no speech to produce a sense of feeling, for example it sets the emotion tone at the funeral. Most of the film 'the Queen' is set in large and clearly expensive estates, such as Buckingham Palace and Balmoral estate, however there is shots of Tony Blair in his house that many people would connect with.

This is used to further impose the contrast between the affluence and advantages of royalty and other people. It also makes them prime minister seems normal and down-to-earth. Setting 'Batman Begins' in a city similar to Chicago, allows the audience to relate what they are seeing, perhaps allowing them to create a stereotypical impression of what life and crime would be like in Gotham. 'The Queen' uses a subtle approach to props and costume which again shows her superiority.

For example they are constantly in formal clothes, unlike the prime minister and members of the public who are seen in the pyjamas or casual attire. This depicts the royal family as out of touch with the British Public. In comparison, there are a number of props and costumes used in 'Batman Begins', particularly the bat

Voices of "The Dead" - Comparing Film and Literature Gertrud Schmitz, 2004-03-05 Seminar paper from the year 1990 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Comparative Literature grade very good Ruhr University of Bochum English Seminar course Joyce Dubliners and Portrait Of The Artist As A Young Man language English abstract In the last paragraph of the introduction it is said what this paper does not do but the exact aim of the study is not stated This is of course not the ideal procedure how a Seminararbeit should be written without having a specific aim in mind My aim in fact was to compare Huston's film and Joyce's short story in a way that made it possible to express some of the fascinating details of both I did not know the results that this would lead to To take the concept of point of view which exists both in literary and filmic theory as a basis for comparison lead to a good and surprising result It offered a way to do exactly what I wanted that is simply to watch and to read In this way the different techniques of the film and the story began to crystallize or rather the way a reader or viewer was lead to an understanding The result was successful primarily because point of view offers a metaphor which comprises seeing as well as telling and captures a notion of subjectivity as well as objectivity If one needed to state the aim of the paper the best would be to say that it was not to be lead by an idea but to let the film and the story have the lead and to see how their differences and characteristics would single out and the concept of point of view is a concept which allows one to take up exactly that position as simply either a reader in the story or a viewer in the film Writing and Cinema Jonathan
