

CyberLink PowerDirector Quick Start Guide

Importing: you can also import any existing media that is on your computer's hard drive and use it in your production. This is done in the Edit module of CyberLink PowerDirector by clicking on the  button.

Setting up capture profiles: before you begin capturing, make sure to set your capture profile, i.e. set the media file type created and the quality of the captured file.

To do this:

1. In Capture mode, click the Profile button after you have selected your capture device.
2. In the profile window, select the file format and set the quality of the recorded file.
3. If you want to customize the media file profile, select the New button and then customize the resolution, bitrate, compression, etc., as required.

IEEE 1394 vs. USB import: if your DV/HDV camcorder connects to your computer via a IEEE 1394 cable, select the Capture button and then the  or  option as required. Follow the instructions on the UI to capture your video.

If your camcorder connects via a USB cable, first manually transfer the video files to your computer's hard drive and then import the files into the media library in Edit mode.

Editing

The Edit mode is where you create your video production by adding media to the workspace timeline.

Track Manager: if required, you can add additional video and audio tracks. You can add up to 100 video and audio tracks to the timeline.

To add tracks, click on  to open the Track Manager.

Resizing the Workspace: the look of the workspace is fully expandable and customizable based on your personal preference.

Simply drag the borders of the preview window and timeline to resize them to your liking. This allows you to get the most out of your display device space and customize the size of the preview window and timeline as you work.

Preview Resolution: if the resolution of your production appears low or degraded in the preview window, select  and then a higher preview resolution from the list.

The higher the resolution you select, the more resources that are required to preview your video production.

Produce & Create Disc

The Produce and Create Disc modes are part of the post production process. Producing creates a video file on your hard drive that you can watch, share, upload, etc. Create Disc lets you burn your production to a disc in a variety of formats.

Customizing Video Profiles: when producing a video file, after you select the file format, make sure to set up profile of the file, i.e. set the video quality of the outputted file.

To do this:

1. In Produce mode, after selecting the output file format, select the profile you want to use from the profile drop-downs available.
2. If you want to customize the profile, if available, click the  button and then customize the resolution, bitrate, compression, frame rate, etc., as required. You can now output files at up to 60 frames per second for some profiles.
