CBP like all border agencies worldwide has a significant potential vulnerability the threat of corruption Moreover because CBP has the largest number of armed sworn law enforcement officers in the United States over 44 000 there is a very real potential for the use of excessive and unnecessary force especially by CBP s Border Patrol given the difficult environment in which it operates In its brief history CBP has not been noted for its transparency when it comes to use of force incidents although this is changing and given its size it has never developed a truly CBP wide process for receiving tracking and responding to public complaints Its disciplinary process takes far too long to be an effective deterrent The CBP Integrity Advisory Panel was charged by the Secretary to make findings and recommendations based on law enforcement best practices regarding use of force preventing corruption investigative capabilities needed to address criminal and serious misconduct within CBP engagement in interagency task forces such as the Border Corruption Task Forces using intelligence driven approaches proactively to identify corruption and other misconduct and addressing transparency issues pertaining to incident response discipline and stakeholder outreach Government Accountability Office, 2009 Securing the nation's borders from illegal entry of aliens and contraband including terrorists and weapons of mass destruction continues to be a major challenge. In November 2005 the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) announced the launch of the Secure Border Initiative (SBI), a multiyear, multibillion dollar program aimed at securing U.S. borders and reducing illegal immigration. Within DHS, U.S. Customs and Border Protection's (CBP) SBI program is responsible for developing a comprehensive border protection system using technology known as SBInet and tactical infrastructure, fencing, roads, and lighting. GAO was asked to provide periodic updates on the status of the program. This report addresses 1) the extent to which CBP has implemented SBInet and the impact of delays that have occurred and 2) the extent to which CBP has deployed tactical infrastructure and assessed its results. To do this work, GAO reviewed program schedules, status reports, and previous GAO work; interviewed DHS and CBP officials, among others; and visited three SBI sites where initial technology or fencing had been deployed at the time of GAO's review. GAO recommends that the Commissioner of CBP conduct a cost-effective evaluation of the impact of the tactical infrastructure's contribution to border security. DHS agreed with this recommendation.

Southwest Border Security United States. Government Accountability Office, 2017. The southwest border has long been vulnerable to cross-border illegal activity. In fiscal year 2016, Border Patrol apprehended over 409,000 illegal entrants. Border Patrol has employed a variety of land-based surveillance technologies to assist in securing the border. GAO has reported regularly on CBP's progress and challenges deploying surveillance technologies. GAO was asked to review CBP's use of surveillance technology. This report examines 1) the deployment status of surveillance technology programs and the extent to which CBP has developed plans for future technology deployments and 2) what data are available on the contributions of deployed technologies to CBP's border security efforts and the extent to which CBP has assessed technology performance. GAO recommends that Border Patrol issue guidance to improve the quality and usability of its asset assist information.
