

ULTRA-DI DI600P

Thank you for showing confidence in Behringer products by purchasing the ULTRA-DI DI600P. The DI600P is a high-performance passive direct injection box.

- 0 Please read the safety instructions that appear at the end of this document.

Being on stage or in the studio, musicians often look for ways to connect certain signal sources directly to the mixing console. Even though this approach has obvious advantages, there are still some technical hurdles obstructing its implementation. For example, keyboards seldom feature balanced outputs, and guitars can not be directly connected to mixing consoles because of the high impedance of guitar signals.

The DI600P lets you directly tap into a high-impedance, unbalanced signal—for example, the signal between a guitar and a guitar amp. From there on, you can feed the signal directly to a mixing console.

1. Control Elements

Fig. 1: Top view

- 1 Use the INPUT (1/4" TS) connector for connecting signal sources.
- 2 OUTPUT (1/4" TS). This is the unbalanced parallel output. Connect it to the input of your backline or monitor amplifier.

Because the connectors 1 and 2 are wired in parallel, the OUTPUT connector can be used both as an input and as a direct unbalanced output of the INPUT signal. For the latter, you can for example connect OUTPUT with the input of a monitor amplifier.

- 3 OUTPUT (XLR): This is the balanced mic-level output. Use a high-quality balanced microphone cable to establish connection.
- 4 Using the GND LIFT (ground lift) switch, you can fully separate input and output grounding. Depending on how the equipment to which your DI600P is connected is grounded, using the GND LIFT switch lets you lower hum noise or ground loops. When the GND LIFT switch is in LIFT position, the ground connection is interrupted.
- 5 The INST/AMP attenuation switch (30 dB) increases the operating range of the DI600P considerably, from low signal levels of a high-impedance mic or a guitar (INST), all the way to speaker connectors of a guitar amplifier (AMP).
- 6 Switchable FILTER for guitar applications (7.5 kHz, -3 dB).

The SERIAL NUMBER of the DI600P is located at the bottom.

2. Applications

2.1 Connecting an instrument signal

Fig. 2: Guitar → DI-box → guitar amplifier

This illustration shows the standard application of a DI-box. The signal feeding the amplifier remains unchanged; it is simply taken and routed into the amp. The low-impedance balanced signal is forwarded to the mic input of the mixing console. This application has its advantages particularly with bass guitars, because very few microphones can linearly transmit bass frequencies with high signal levels. If you are using effects, insert the DI600P after the effects device, so that you can monitor the effects via the PA system or the recording as well.

2.2 Taking a signal from a speaker output

Fig. 3: Connection to a power amp output

Sometimes, you want to take a signal directly from a speaker output, even though just one speaker output is available. When you set the INST/AMP switch to AMP, you can connect an amp output to your mixing console (up to 3,000 Watts into 4 Ohms), without worrying that it will be damaged due to overload!
