Pentagon's South Asia Defence and Strategic Yearbook is now in its fourth year of publication. It covers relevant issues of defence and security, military affairs and military technology written by experts and academicians themselves. These issues are important for defence services, foreign ministers and security experts, spread among defence units, strategic think tanks, government organisations, public sector units, national and international technology manufacturers and diplomats and bureaucrats. The book has been extremely well received and its circulation has grown tremendously in the last three years. It has been regularly reviewed in the USI Journal and other reputed journals and magazines. As The Book Review has commented, "In comparison to the other yearbooks, this book stands out due to the well documented opinion pieces by the experienced people from the armed forces, think tanks and academics. It creates a space for dialogue on important topics."

As pilots and observers in the Air Service of the American Expeditionary Forces, Americans flew combat missions in France during the Great War. In the first postwar decade, airmen achieved a measure of recognition with the establishment of the Air Corps and during World War II the Army Air Forces attained equal status with the Army Ground Forces. During this first era of military aviation as described by Rebecca Cameron in Training to Fly, the groundwork was laid for the independent United States Air Force. Those were
