

Lab: Snell's Law

<https://phet.colorado.edu/es/simulation/bending-light>

Introduction:

When light travels between two different media, the velocity and wavelength changes. The result is the "bending" of the light. The "bending" of light is referred to as refraction. The "bending" follows a convenient mathematical relationship called Snell's law.

The index of refraction, given by the letter n , is defined as the ratio of the speed of light in a vacuum to the speed of light in a medium: $n = \frac{c}{v}$ where $c = 3 \times 10^8 \text{ m/s}$. For our purposes the speed of light in a vacuum will be the same as that of air.

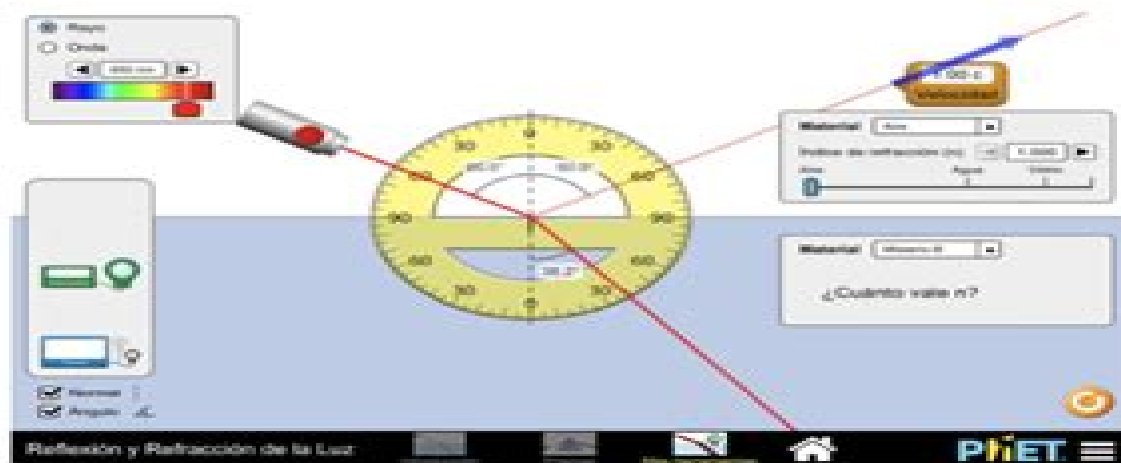

The relationship between the velocity, frequency, and wavelength of a wave in a medium 1 is given by $v_1 = \lambda_1 f$, and for medium 2 is given by $v_2 = \lambda_2 f$. Where the frequency remains constant when light travels between different media.

Objectives:

- ✓ The purpose of this lab is to determine the relationship between the incident angle of a light beam and the refracted angle of the light beam as the beam passes from one medium to another.
- ✓ In addition, students will demonstrate the application of Snell's Law, by determining the critical angle for a light beam that travels from a more dense medium to a less dense medium.

Part I: Discovering Snell's Law.

1. Start the PhET simulation entitled "Bending Light", and click on "More tools" button, set the simulation as shown in the image. Make sure to select "Ray" and check the "Angles" and "Normal" boxes. Drag the circular protractor and the speed indicator tools. The laser can be dragged to change the incident angle, set the incident angle to a different value of 60° .
2. The top area, air, is considered medium 1 with an index of refraction n_1 . The bottom area, mystery B, is considered medium 2 with an index of refraction n_2 .
3. θ_1 = incident angle measured from the normal (dashed line), and θ_2 = refracted angle measured from the normal.
