It began when the received view of scientific knowledge that developed by logical positivists and their intellectual descendants was challenged as bearing little resemblance to and having little relevance for the understanding of real science. Subsequently an overwhelming amount of criticism has been added. One would be hard pressed to find anyone who would support the received view today. Yet in the search for a new analysis of scientific knowledge this view continues to exert influence over the tenor of much of present day philosophy of science in particular over its problems and its methods of analysis. There has however emerged an area within the discipline called by some the new philosophy of science that has been engaged in transforming the problems and methods of philosophy of science. While there is far from a consensus of beliefs in this area most of the following contentions would be affirmed by those working in it that science is an open ended on going activity whose character has changed significantly during its history that science is not a monolithic enterprise that good science can lead to false theories that science has its roots in everyday circumstances needs methods concepts etc Naval Research Reviews, 1996 Cumulative Book Review Digest, 1916 Mathematical Handbook for Scientists and Engineers Granino Arthur Korn, Theresa M.
