Conceptualizing Our Interpersonal Impressions Mental Representations And Internal Objects:

Conceptualizing our Interpersonal Impressions Gillian Steggles, 2015-02-27 This book clarifies a thorny and knotty problem that has interfered with clear thinking among psychoanalysts for over 70 years It provides a rigorous examination of the views theories and contributions of psychoanalysts since their initial appearance to very mixed acclaim among the experimental psychoanalysts who were struggling professionally in war torn London in the early 1940s Extensive details of the data and their analysis have been included so that the scientific basis of the work s conclusion may be understood and appreciated Psychoanalysis is replete with theories but not so much evidence This book however produces evidence for scrutiny and as such provides new evidence based knowledge about psychoanalytic phenomena in everyday life as it is commonly understood and which is not derived from research on the couch The conclusions drawn in the book include the new knowledge that mental representations and internal objects do both occur in everyday life and can co exist Self, Symptoms and Psychotherapy Neil Cheshire, Helmut Thomae, Helmut Thomä, 1987 An interdisciplinary critical examination of a range of psychodynamic and cognitive approaches to the analysis and treatment of common disturbances in self concept Discusses problems in such areas as self esteem self perception identification assertiveness and sociophobia The theories and methods of the prevailing psychodynamic ethos are examined from a philosophic view and compared with alternative accounts drawn from cognitive and behavioral learning theory Furthermore these theories are continually tested against live evidence from clinical case studies psychometric investigations and original research on psychopathology and the nature of psychotherapeutic processes Also includes verbatim transcripts and therapists commentaries from different types of treatment and therapy plus extensive and detailed cross referencing among the separate contributions Knowledge for Sustainable Development Unesco, 2002 This three volume set presents a multidisciplinary examination of the global life support systems on which we depend by providing a selection of articles on sustainable development issues written by international experts Volume 1 focuses on the earth and atmospheric sciences mathematical biological and medical sciences social sciences and humanities physical sciences engineering and technology resources Volume 2 covers chemical sciences energy science and water engineering as well as the main issues related to environmental sciences and ecological resources Volume 3 offers a comprehensive view of food and agricultural engineering resources the management of human and natural resources economic and institutional resources information technology and systems management as well as a regional overview of sustainable development issues Each article includes a bibliography a glossary and a guide to further information available as part of the on line Encyclopedia version <http://www.eolss.net> A.M.A. Archives of Neurology and Psychiatry American Medical Association, 1959 Psychiatry Allan Tasman, Jerald Kay, Jeffrey A. Lieberman, 1997 Scholarly and pragmatic PSYCHIATRY provides comprehensive coverage of the field by integrating psychodynamic and biological theories and practices Presents information about normal developmental processes the manifestation of normal behavior signs and symptoms of disordered behavior and mental processes clinical diagnosis and the development of a treatment plan Addresses specific psychiatric disorders in detail Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts ,2008-12 Associated

Systems Theory Robert S. Wyer,Donal E. Carlston,1994 From its inception the purpose of the Advances in Social Cognition series has been to present and evaluate new theoretical advances in all areas of social cognition and information processing An entire volume is devoted to each theory allowing the theory to be evaluated from a variety of perspectives and permitting its implications for a wide range of issues to be examined The series reflects two major characteristics of social cognition the high level of activity in the field and the interstitial nature of the work The present volume examines the area of person impression formation with a detailed conceptualization of person impressions and the processes that give rise to their construction Carlston s lead article provides a comprehensive account of the representational systems that underlie people s exposure to social stimuli and their ultimate production of memories judgments and behaviors The theory attempts to explain where different kinds of representations come from how they are related to each other and how they relate to important cognitive and behavioral activities In pursuing this ambitious objective Carlston identifies four fundamental systems visual verbal behavioral and affective and postulates the manner in which the systems interact
