Motivation in the Classroom Frank

Oelmüller, 2007-11 Seminar paper from the year 2006 in the subject English Pedagogy Didactics Literature Studies grade keine Bielefeld University Faculty for Linguistics and Literature course Language Learning Motivation and Individual Learner Differences 8 entries in the bibliography language English abstract If I want to know more about the world then I ll achieve this only by learning This kind of motivation not only was designated as an expansive one recently but also as the one which leads to best results The main hallmark of the expansive learning is the fact that it is born out of complete voluntariness in other words the decision to do it or to leave it rests completely on my own In contrast to this the defensive learning is motivated exclusively by short term objectives in order to avoid a negative assessment from either the parents the teachers or any other fellow beings A normal student in this sense will either pretend a learning progression or learn just as much as necessary This however is supported by the evaluation system of today s schools Moreover a student who provides any expansive learning interest may even disturb the planned curriculum and therefore be blamed Most teachers won t be fond of any newly discovered expansive learning opportunities by a student in particular if they are heading behind the syllabus The main questions this essay will be concerned with are whether the teacher is able to foster intrinsic and expansive learning at all and following that what are the teacher s means to foster this kind of learning Since intrinsic and expansive learning is closely linked to the concept of interest the areas discussed in this essay will deal with three conditions for the development of interest at school These are firstly an interest in the subject secondly an informing feedback and thirdly proper instructions all of them in regard to the teacher Derived from these conditions the essay Incongruity Richard Robert Knight, 1970 Intrinsically Motivated Learning in Natural and Artificial Systems Gianluca Baldassarre, Marco Mirolli, 2013-03-29 It has become clear to researchers in robotics and adaptive behaviour that current approaches are yielding systems with limited autonomy and capacity for self improvement To learn autonomously and in a cumulative fashion is one of the hallmarks of intelligence and we know that higher mammals engage in exploratory activities that are not directed to pursue goals of immediate relevance for survival and reproduction but are instead driven by intrinsic motivations such as curiosity interest in novel stimuli or surprising events and interest in learning new behaviours The adaptive value of such intrinsically motivated activities lies in the fact that they allow the cumulative acquisition of knowledge and skills that can be used later to accomplish fitness enhancing goals Intrinsic motivations continue during adulthood and in humans they underlie lifelong learning artistic creativity and scientific discovery while they are also the basis for processes that strongly affect human well being such as the sense of competence self determination and self esteem This book has two aims to present the state of the art in research on intrinsically motivated learning and to identify the related scientific and technological open challenges and most promising research directions The book introduces the concept of intrinsic motivation in artificial systems reviews the relevant literature offers insights from the neural and behavioural sciences and presents novel tools for research The book is organized into six parts the chapters in Part I give general overviews on the concept of intrinsic motivations their function and possible mechanisms for implementing them Parts II III and IV focus on three classes of intrinsic motivation mechanisms those based on predictors on novelty and on competence Part V discusses mechanisms that are complementary to intrinsic motivations and Part VI introduces tools and experimental frameworks for investigating intrinsic motivations The contributing authors are among the pioneers carrying out fundamental work on this topic drawn from related disciplines such as artificial intelligence robotics artificial life evolution machine learning developmental psychology cognitive science and neuroscience The book will be of value to graduate students and academic researchers in these domains and to engineers engaged with the design of autonomous adaptive robots The contributing authors are among the pioneers carrying out fundamental work on this topic drawn from related disciplines such as artificial intelligence robotics artificial life evolution machine learning developmental psychology cognitive science and neuroscience The book will be of value to graduate students and academic researchers in these domains and to engineers engaged with the design of autonomous adaptive robots
