

EL 115: MIDDLE ENGLISH LITERATURE

Introduction

Medieval English literature is all the written manifestation that took place in the Middle Ages. It was characterized by generating works that were mostly by unknown authors, which covered topics related to morals and religion, chivalry stories, religious texts, among others. It was initially written in Latin and later in the national languages of some countries.

Background

Middle English:

This period started with the Norman Conquest in 1066 and ended with the end of 15th century.

1066 to 1340:

In this period, the span from 1066 to 1340 is called Anglo-Norman period because the literature of that period was written mainly in the French dialect spoken by the new ruling class of England.

1340 to 1400:

The period from 1340 to 1400 is called the age of Chaucer because Chaucer, the great poet, dominated this period.

1476- William Caxton established the Caxton press.

Prints The Canterbury Tales.

Characteristics

Impersonality/Anonymity - One of the most important characteristics of Middle English literature is its impersonality, by which I mean that most of its literature was anonymous, and we don't know the names of those who wrote it.

Derivative Stories - Originality was not a major requirement of medieval authors. Story material, in particular, was looked upon as communal property, and the notion of intellectual property did not yet exist. To have based one's work on an old, authoritative source was a virtue.
