

Note: The two routers need to be preconfigured by the instructor or lab assistant to have the correct IP addresses on their LAN and WAN interfaces. Router A will provide the clocking signal as DCE.

Start this lab with the equipment turned off and with cabling disconnected. Work in teams of two with one person per LAN. The following resources will be required:

- Two workstations with an Ethernet 10/100 NIC installed
- Two Ethernet 10BaseT or Fast Ethernet switches or two hubs
- Two routers with an RJ-45 Ethernet or Fast Ethernet interface (or an AUI interface) and at least one serial interface.
- 10BASE-T AUI transceiver (DB-15 to RJ-45) for a router with an AUI Ethernet interface, which is a 2500 Series
- Four Ethernet straight-through cables for connecting the workstations and routers to the hub or switch
- One female (DCE) and one male (DTE) V.35 cable for interconnecting the routers

Step 1 Identify and connect the proper Ethernet cable from the PC to the switch

- The connection between the PC and the switch will be accomplished using a Category 5 or 5e straight-through patch cable. Attach one end to the NIC and the other end to a port on the switch or hub. Be sure to examine the cable ends carefully and select only a straight-through cable.
- Examine the switch or hub.

What is the model number of the switch or hub? _____

Step 2 Identify the Ethernet or Fast Ethernet interfaces on the routers

- Examine the routers.
- What is the model number of the Router A? _____
- What is the model number of the Router B? _____
- Locate one or more RJ-45 connectors on each router labeled "10/100 Ethernet" as shown below. The identifier may vary depending on the type of router used; a 2600 series router is shown. A 2500 series router will have an AUI DB-15 Ethernet port labeled "AUI 0". These will require a 10Base-T transceiver to connect to the RJ-45 cable.
