Special Relativity: Speed and Time

Section 12.1. The time  $\Delta t$  measured for two events occurring at a speed  $v$  relative to each other is longer than the  $\Delta t_0$  measured for the same events as observed in their own rest frame. This time dilation is experienced by the resulting red-shifting of regularly spaced flashes of light. The  $\gamma$  factor, derived from considering the spacing of events from nearly at 0.0 distance to where the spacing is becoming the width, and at distance  $\Delta x$  where the spacing is approaching the width. Read the textbook carefully and fill in the readings in the appropriate blank before the next class session. Review the workbooks for each class session.
