Kenneth Tan, Jack J. Dongarra, Alfons G. Hoekstra, 2003-08-01 Computational Science is the scientific discipline that aims at the development and understanding of new computational methods and techniques to model and simulate complex systems The area of application includes natural systems such as biology environmental and geo sciences

physics and chemistry and synthetic systems such as electronics and nancial and economic systems The discipline is a bridge between classical computer science logic complexity architecture algorithms mathematics and the use of computers in the aforementioned areas The relevance for society stems from the numerous challenges that exist in the various science and engineering disciplines which can be tackled by advances made in this eld For instance new models and methods to study environmental issues like the quality of air water and soil and weather and climate predictions through simulations as well as the simulation supported development of cars airplanes and medical and transport systems etc Paraphrasing R Kenway R D Kenway Contemporary Physics 1994 There is an important message to scientists politicians and industrialists in the future science the best industrial design and manufacture the greatest medical progress and the most accurate environmental monitoring and forecasting will be done by countries that most rapidly exploit the full potential ofcomputational science Nowadays we have access to high end computer architectures and a large range of computing environments mainly as a consequence of the enormous s mulus from the various international programs on advanced computing e g Cell Cycle Control Tim Humphrey,Gavin Brooks,2008-02-04 The fundamental question of how cells grow and divide has perplexed biologists since the development of the cell theory in the mid 19th century when it was recognized by Virchow and others that all cells come from cells In recent years considerable effort has been applied to the identification of the basic molecules and mechanisms that regulate the cell cycle in a number of different organisms Such studies have led to the elucidation of the central paradigms that underpin eukaryotic cell cycle control for which Lee Hartwell Tim Hunt and Paul Nurse were jointly awarded the Nobel Prize for Medicine and Physiology in 2001 in recognition of their seminal contributions to this field The importance of understanding the fundamental mechanisms that modulate cell division has been reiterated by relatively recent discoveries of links between cell cycle control and DNA repair growth cellular metabolism development and cell death This new phase of integrated cell cycle research provides further challenges and opportunities to the biological and medical worlds in applying these basic concepts to understanding the etiology of cancer and other proliferative diseases
