

POSITION PAPER ABOUT CYBER BULLYING

INTRODUCTION

Bullies are always around and it is a serious matter, but due to the advent of technology, it can now be a new platform for this action. Parents must be aware of the signs of cyber bullying and effects it's because it can lead to embarrassing effect, anxiety, depression and higher risk for suicidal thoughts, attempts and completed suicide.

BODY

Cyber bullying is the use of internet, interactive and digital technologies or mobile phones to bully a person by sending an intimidating, threatening, harassing, embarrassing or target another person.

Cyber bullying can be easily identified – It can occur through other's may be thinking about you and how other's may judge you negatively for what you have done or not done. If the person was frequently embarrassed it will lead to complex post-traumatic stress disorder and it may lead to depression and other stress related disorder, it will manifest in the company of fear, shame and guilt. The victim can experience symptoms of depression including sadness, loneliness, insecurity, poor self-esteem, academic decline, feeling of not belonging, societal thoughts and behavior. If these feeling worsen it may lead to suicidal. There is a strong link between cyber bullying and suicide. These can be observed of the person loose its interest in favorite activities, talking or showing interest in death, saying goodbye and saying to people.

Bullying can be easily identified – it can occur through post, emails, instant messages, text or tweet. Others are the response to a status update on Facebook, twitter or Instagram that is harsh, mean or cruel. Other acts can be considered as cyber bullying which is not obvious are posting private photos, videos, and personal information that can harass or hurt another person. But most of the cyber bullied teenagers don't want to tell it to their parents or teachers. Maybe they feel ashamed or the fear that the privileges for using those technologies will be taken away to them.

CONCLUSION

Cyber bullying can embarrass on its target person because it can result to feeling of shame and it is accompanied by fear and confusion. It is a fear of what others may be thinking about you and how others may judge you negatively for what you have done or not.
