It has been well documented that the country's management hierarchy does not operate in the regions. Managing the nation's transportation infrastructure means providing "proper maintenance for the roads, the water supply and the ports, to ensure that the playing field is not too uneven, that the government, the private sector and the community" It has never significantly been working, even with the introduction of the railways, and the government's approach to managing the country's infrastructure is "very poor" and the country is not the most developed country in the world and is not a member of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and the World Bank.

Transportation through the light microscope is a major impediment to cell line analysis. However, the extremely short exposure times of FACS-based systems preclude this. Therefore, a technique must be developed to transport the cells of FACS-sorted line to a suitable supporting thin-film substrate for analysis of numerous cellular features. A laser-activated microfluidic technique for the release and isolation of
