

NOTE

The Pro Line II ADF-62 system is now available as a replacement for the original Pro Line ADF-60 system, but a Pro Line II transponder is not yet available. However, an adapter (CAD-62) is available that allows the serial digital Pro Line II CTL-62 and CTL-60 to control the original Pro Line ADF-60r and TDR-60 respectively.

Following this discussion are the detailed operating procedures.

VHF-21A/B and VHF-22A/B VHF Communications Transceivers

The VHF-21A/B is designed as a direct replacement for the original Pro Line VHF-20 series without changing the interconnect cable or the mount. The VHF-22A/B uses the new Collins Thinline II connectors, with more pins, to provide additional operating features and improved performance in multiple VHF-22A/B installations. The A or B suffixes of the equipment type number refer to standard and extended frequency ranges respectively. The 'A' versions have a frequency range from 118.000 to 136.975 MHz. The 'B' versions have an extended frequency range from 118.000 to 151.975 MHz. The VHF-1X /V2X convey their maximum operating frequency to the CTL-22

CDR Control. The CTL-22 will not allow pilot selection of a frequency outside the range of the transceiver to which it is connected. All versions of the VHF-1X /V2X are available with wider receiver bandwidth for use in regions where the frequency tolerance of the ground-based transmitters is not controlled accurately enough to support the 25-kHz channel spacing. Units with the wider band receiver will pass signals with frequency errors up to +13 kHz from the nominal channel frequency. The pilot should note that this greater bandwidth will limit the ability of the receiver in those units to reject undesired signals on an adjacent 25-kHz channel.

The VHF-1X /V2X transmitter is rated at 16 watts maximum power, and transmitter time is limited by a clock function to provide automatic spark-microphone protection, Capture effect automatic speech and a squelch-on circuit (VHF-22). Only to reduce common-mode interference are also new features of the Pro Line II VHF-2X /V2X.

VIR-32 Navigation Receiver

The Pro Line II VIR-32 is business aviation's first fully-digital VOR/LOC, glideslope, and marker beacon receiver, and will directly replace the original Pro Line VIR-30A in any existing installation. The microprocessor-based design of the VIR-32 provides extensive monitoring of the navigational information, plus other features only recently made possible with advanced circuit techniques.
