Using Our Senses:

The Nose Knows

With its trillions of cells and complex processes, the human body is an engineering and communication marvel. Doctors and scientists have tried for years to figure out how the body works and what to do when it doesn't. Read this article to uncover some of the secrets of our sense of smell.

Have you ever tried to describe a favorite smell to someone who hasn't experienced it? Imagine that a delicious cake is baking in the oven. It's hard to find words to capture the vanilla and cinnamon fragrance of that warm kitchen. What if you want to tell about the pine and earthy odor of a forest? People end up comparing the smell to something else or describing how it makes them feel. Surprisingly, the functions and activities, or the physiology, of this sense are fairly simple and direct.

The sense of smell is part of respiration, which is the physical process of breathing. Inhaling and exhaling, we live in a constant stream of odors. These odors are molecules of evaporated chemicals that float in the air.

Normal breathing through the nose allows us to pick up most smells. A sharp sniff sends even more molecules into the nasal cavity behind the bridge of the nose. This cavity is lined with a thin layer of watery material called mucus and also with tiny hair-like projections. On these projections are highly sensitive receptor cells, which are easily stimulated. These cells fire millions of impulses to the brain's smell center. This is why, when you have symptoms, or signs, of a cold, you may lose your sense of smell. When the body produces too much mucus, the nerve impulses are slowed or stopped.

Different parts of the brain's smell center are sensitive to different odors. When some nerve endings are stimulated, others aren't. The specific combination is like a code that the brain interprets. The average person can detect more than ten thousand different odors, from the benign, or harmless, scent of baby powder to the stench of rotten eggs.

Smell is probably the most direct of the senses. Other sense organs also send messages to the brain, but often these must pass through other organs along the way. This means that smell is one of our stronger, more potent, senses. A corps, or body, of researchers has studied how fragrance affects people. These scientists tested people who have a strong constitution and a healthy medical history. One finding is that the smell of spiced apples reduces blood pressure. Cloves and rosemary make test subjects more alert. Thyme and peppermint rejuvenate tired workers. One experiment even showed that the scent of chamomile reduced inflammation and contributed to the healing of infections. Our sense of smell affects all aspects of our health and well-being.
