CONTINUING CARE CHRONICLE

Source: <http://www.fishbase.org>

Abstract: Patients with moderate to severe depression and anxiety disorders are at high risk of suicidal ideation and suicidal behavior. This review examines the effectiveness of pharmacological and psychological treatments for the management of suicidal ideation and suicidal behavior. The review is based on a search of the literature from 1980 to 2007. The review is organized into two main sections: pharmacological treatments and psychological treatments. The review concludes that there is limited evidence for the effectiveness of pharmacological treatments for the management of suicidal ideation and suicidal behavior. Psychological treatments, such as cognitive behavioral therapy and dialectical behavior therapy, are more effective in reducing suicidal ideation and suicidal behavior. The review also discusses the importance of a comprehensive approach to the management of suicidal ideation and suicidal behavior, including the use of pharmacological and psychological treatments, and the involvement of family and community support.
