- Recognizing high estimated expenses when revenue is high so that less estimated expenses can be recognized when earnings are lower and deferring revenue for “tougher times” are examples of building a cookie jar reserve.
- The SEC has issued SABs 101 and 104, identifying more carefully the circumstances in which it is appropriate for a company to defer revenue.

Board Structure, Board Characteristics and Monitoring Effectiveness David Port, 2021-09-23 Master's Thesis from the year 2021 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 1.0 Maastricht

University School of Business and Economics language English abstract This study examines whether a board's structure and composition are indicative of its monitoring effectiveness in terms of mitigating opportunistic management behavior French companies may legally choose to operate with a board of directors One tier board or a separate management board and supervisory board Two tier board While the French Corporate Governance Code sets out uniform guidelines on board composition and activity regardless of a given board structure respective directors face different challenges in establishing adequate management oversight Hence externally prescribed board composition may have varying or unintended consequences Further both board structures have been attributed with different conceptual advantages that may influence their practical monitoring performance Using the occurrence of earnings management as an indicator for poor management supervision empirical results show that companies with two tier boards are superior monitors More generally for France I also find that independent boards are associated with less earnings management whereas busy boards are associated with more earnings management I do not find a measurable impact of director financial expertise Finally mixed results are presented on the existence of a moderating effect of board structure on the relationship between board composition and earnings management Basics of Accounting & Finance ,2005 Annual Institute on Securities Regulation ,2008
