
English Language A Level CLA Revision Exam Questions And Answers 2023

Applying knowledge - Answer Consider implications - what is older person trying to initiate/convey

- trying to tell child importance of something - pragmatics
- trying to ensure child is listening
- instigate a response

Engage with child's use

- discuss what they're trying to state
- awareness of any language features (morphology, syntax etc.)
- what do they not yet include (any omissions) so what stage are they at and are they advanced
- anything paralinguistic to communicate instead of lang.

Noam Chomsky - Answer 1960s, Language Acquisition Device - born with an inherited ability to learn any human lang. LAD encodes major principles of a lang. and its grand structures into the brain. Can't learn through imitation alone because the lang. spoken around them is highly irregular, often broken up, ungrammatical

Support for LAD - Answer - children learning to speak never make grammatical errors like wrong order of SVO

- child notices adult's grammatically incorrect sentence
- virtuous errors show they're not learning through imitation alone

Against LAD - Answer although it's clear that children don't learn lang. through imitation alone, it doesn't prove that they must have an LAD. Could merely be through general learning and understanding abilities and interactions with other people

Bruner - Answer 1970s Language Acquisition Support System - caregivers support child's linguistic development in social situations. Clear patterns of interaction between child and caregiver in everyday situations (meal/bath time).

- Caregiver points things out and asks questions ("what's that? Is that a doggy?"). through this support child gradually asks questions themselves

Meredith Rowe - Answer there's a window of opportunity when children are just getting into their productive communication, 10-18 months - predicts their language ability very strongly later

- strong link between gestures and the ability to pick up vocab. gets child engaged and interacting

Dr Caspar Addyman - Answer babies can hear and remember music even when in the womb
