The information presented in the TED talk provides essential incentives concerning debating and ways of settling arguments appropriately. It would be necessary for debaters to familiarize themselves with the techniques needed in debates in order to be persuasive and successful in their debates. The TED speaker also provides relevant examples of personalities who have successfully defended their opinions in one-on-one debates and the skills they utilized. Therefore, the TED talk is insightful and inspiring to people interested in becoming debaters in their life.

The TED speaker gives the example of Mister Rodgers, who debated and defended his ideas on having federal funding for public broadcasting increment. Mister Rodgers faced the United States subcommittee on communication, which John Pastore chaired. At the beginning of the debate, it seemed that the ideas presented by Mister Rodgers would be dismissed by John Pastore (Dhar, 2018). However, Mister Rodgers was persuasive enough to convince John Pastore to listen to his proposal, and eventually, the increment was granted. The reference to the debate and persuasion of Mister Rogers is an inspiration to other debaters and opinion presenters that one can raise opinions and defend them until they are accepted. The speaker advises the audience on the need to focus on discussing and criticizing ideas and not the people who present them. That way, debaters would be more effective and successful in presenting and defending their beliefs. The speaker uses the rhetorical appeal of credibility to strengthen her ideas. The speaker strengthens her ideas by relating them to real-life situations where effective debating led to winning a debate.

Evidence

The speaker uses evidence from research conducted in various universities to stress and confirm her points. In one instance, the speaker was involved in an activity to find solutions to the issue of unemployment. She was made to work with various agencies from the government.
