The memorandum and articles are then registered with the Registrar of Companies. The next step is to issue shares to the public. The company's first meeting is then held to elect the first directors and to approve the company's first financial statements.

The memorandum must specify the company's name, its registered office, its objects, and the names and addresses of the subscribers to the memorandum.

The articles must specify the company's internal regulations, including the powers of the directors, the rights of the shareholders, and the procedure for the election of directors.

The company's first meeting is held to elect the first directors and to approve the company's first financial statements. The company's first financial statements are then audited by an independent auditor.

The articles of association are the company's internal regulations, and they set out the powers of the directors, the rights of the shareholders, and the procedure for the election of directors. The company's internal regulations are the company's financial statements, and they set out the company's financial position and performance.

4.3 What is a company's constitution for shareholders?
