Push to attract girls to STEM

ALANAH FROST

GIRLS are pursuing careers in science despite being outnumbered by their male peers.

More than 387,000 women were employed in areas of science, technology, engineering or mathematics (STEM) in November 2020 — making up 42.6 per cent of the state workforce for such occupations.

This is an increase on 2019, where 41.4 per cent of STEM workers were women.

But women and girls are still less likely to complete tertiary education in STEM than their male counterparts, something the science, medical and education communities are trying hard to change.

Liz Baker, a neonatologist and researcher at the Royal Women's Hospital, works with babies who are born premature or sick.

"There's lots of stereotypes about labs and white coats, but what a career in science can actually look like is so much more varied," Dr Baker said. "Research wasn't at the forefront of my career plans when I started medicine and it was probably being exposed to that as a junior doctor that inspired me to go down that path."

Dr Baker is taking part in the hospital's virtual Meet A Scientist event, which is being held on Thursday to mark the International Day of Women and Girls in Science, and will be broadcast to more than 4500 Australian school girls.

Caitlin Lewis, 17, a year 12 student and vice-captain at John Monash Science School in Clayton, will be attending.

"My first dream career was to be an astronaut, so I've always wanted to go into STEM," she said. "I want to try and make the world a better place and by going into science you learn about how the world works and what needs to be improved."

She said it was daunting that in many areas, particularly engineering, women were still outnumbered, but said it was "important to try and break the stereotypes, and try and spark some curiosity" so women will pursue a career in STEM.

Sue Matthews, chief executive at RWH said: "In Australia, just 20 per cent of girls are interested in a STEM-related career, versus 40 per cent of boys.

"Statistics like this underline the importance of supporting, encouraging and elevating women in science."
