Evaluation of Energy Expenditure on the Woodway Curve Treadmill Lance T. Maerz, 2013 This study was designed to 1 compare the caloric expenditure values displayed on the Curve s console to directly measured values and 2 if there was a significant difference between displayed and measured values to develop a regression equation to more accurately predict energy expenditure on the Curve Fifty five volunteers 27 male and 28 female walked or ran on the Curve treadmill at four different speeds between 2 8 mph for five minutes at each speed The caloric expenditure values displayed on the Curve s console were recorded and compared to measured calories using a Jaeger Oxycon portable metabolic analyzer Across the speeds tested the Curve console systematically overestimated measured caloric expenditure by 67 117%

Comparing Calorie Expenditure and Rating of Perceived Exertion Between the Curve and a Motorized Treadmill Nicholas B. Robertson, 2014 The purpose of this study was to determine if any difference in Calorie expenditure and rating of perceived exertion RPE exists when walking on the Curve or a motorized treadmill Recruitment of participants was done through recruitment flyers placed on campus After indicating interest participants eligibility was determined by the PAR Q and being unfamiliar with walking on the Curve Twelve participants volunteered for the study five males seven females The mean age of participants was 22 58 years 2 31 and mean weight was 76 96kg 16 19 On testing days each participant was fitted with a polar heart rate monitor and the K4 b2 metabolic gas analyzer K4 The order of tests was randomly assigned The warm up consisted of walking at 3 MPH until steady state heart rate was reached which took approximately three minutes The actual test consisted of walking at 3 MPH for 10 minutes on each treadmill Oxygen consumption was collected on a breath by breath basis by the K4 Calorie expenditure was reported using the formula of one liter of Oxygen consumed equals five Calories Calorie expenditure was then totaled over 10 minutes RPE was obtained during the last minute of each exercise bout To determine whether there was a significant difference in Calorie expenditure and RPE while walking under the two conditions two paired samples t tests were performed Alpha level was set at p

Measuring the Biomechanics and Energetics of Curved Vs. Traditional Treadmills in Female Adults Dustin T. Durke, 2019 Abstract Manufacturers claim that exercising on a curved treadmill will promote proper running mechanics and up to 30% more calories compared to a traditional motorized treadmill If the curved treadmill is able to increase metabolic costs while minimizing load on the user it may prove to be beneficial to all populations Exercising on a compliant curved surface may prove to be especially beneficial to special populations where the onset of pain limits the duration of cardiovascular exercise If the curved treadmill can minimize joint stress it may prolong the length of time that someone with special considerations may be able to exercise

PURPOSE The purpose of this study is to examine whether a non motorized curved aka curved treadmill will provide a biomechanical or energetic advantage compared to a motorized flat aka traditional treadmill We hypothesize that when compared to the traditional motorized treadmill the non motorized treadmill will result in 1 significantly higher caloric expenditure and VO<sub>2</sub>% value and a 2 significant increase in forward trunk flexion under all testing conditions

METHODS Participants wore a breathing mask connected to the Oxycon Mobile system to measure the metabolic cost of all each movement pattern Additionally participants were outfitted with reflective markers in order to capture 3 dimensional kinematic data Participants were instructed to perform at their self selected pace and afterwards randomly instructed to change speed to 15% above and 15% below their self selected walking and running pace In total there were four 15 minute blocks of exercise each of which were separated by a 10 minute block of rest to ensure adequate recovery

RESULTS There was not a significant increase in the amount of trunk flexion under any of the conditions between the curved and traditional treadmill There was a significant increase in the amount of energy expenditure from the traditional treadmill to the curved treadmill

CONCLUSION While still largely uninvestigated curved treadmills are becoming more popular as a modality of cardiovascular exercise Our findings suggest that female athletes may benefit from using curved treadmills over traditional treadmills because of the increased caloric expenditure and aerobic capacity but further research needs to be conducted in order to assess the viability as a safe option with respect to musculoskeletal structures
