

'Fleetguard' system

This system consists of an expendable screw-on type canister which contains 710 cc of ether under pressure. The ether is supplied to the engine by a remotely operated priming valve. Each operation of the priming valve causes the atomisation and injection of 6 cc of ether into the inlet manifold.

- 1 Move the lever for the speed control away from the IDLE position and operate the start switch.
- 2 When the engine turns, pull the control knob to operate the priming valve for two seconds and then release it. This action causes ether to be discharged for three seconds into the inlet manifold.
- 3 According to the adverse ambient temperature, repeat the operation of the priming valve until the engine starts and runs. Release the start switch but continue to repeat the operation of the priming valve until the engine speed increases. Then return the lever of the speed control to the IDLE position.
- 4 Do not turn the engine continuously at cranking speed for more than 20 seconds. If the engine does not start, there must be an interval of 20 seconds before steps 1 to 3 are repeated.

How to run the engine

The precautions which follow will help to ensure a long and fault-free life for the engine:

- 1 Do not operate the engine at high speeds and loads until the coolant has reached a minimum temperature of 78 °C (172 °F).
- 2 Do not allow the engine to run at idle speed, or without load, for prolonged periods.
- 3 Do not exceed the maximum rated speed of the engine.
- 4 Never allow an engine to continue to run if the oil pressure is below 207 kN/m² (30 lbf/in²) at the rated speed.
- 5 Fill the fuel tank/s at the end of each day to prevent condensation and to allow sediment to fall to the bottom of the tank.

How to stop the engine

- 1 Operate the engine for 3 minutes at idle speed with no load to allow the turbocharger to reduce speed and temperature.
- 2 Move the switches for the engine protection devices to their OFF positions.
- 3 Move the stop control or switch to the STOP position and release it after the engine has stopped.
