Self-reporting: The participants were to get their third dependency treatment from their health service or a friend/family member. They were contacted by email later to find out how they were getting on and whether they had any problems with their treatment. The third dependency treatment was given over the phone.

This second generation level dependency constitutes the core selling point, whereas the first is more an ancillary. The second generation level dependency constitutes the business plan selling point whereas the first is the support of the business plan which is equally important but is not necessarily the primary selling point and business plan itself has not a lot of substance as far as it is an end in itself.
