

USING A DICHOTOMOUS KEY FOR INVERTEBRATE PHYLA

Taxonomic Key to the Major Invertebrate Phyla

Most taxonomic keys are "dichotomous," which means that they are written with a series of two choices about the anatomy of an animal (or photograph of an animal). You are not to read the key from start to finish like a book or a poem. Instead, you should read both choices, determine which choice best applies to the specimen you are looking at, and go next to the question number that the key indicates. You will often skip numbers in between that don't apply to your specimen.

Vocabulary:

Body plan: the overall organization of an animal's body.

Invertebrate: an animal that does not have a backbone.

Phylum: animals grouped together by their similar body plans.

Segmented: animal whose body is divided into distinct sections so that it looks jointed, such as a centipede.

Tentacle: slender, finger-like extension usually found near an animal's mouth or head used to catch and handle food.
