LEARNING, TEACHING, AND EDUCATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY

WHAT WOULD YOU DO? ▼

TEACHERS' CASEBOOK: Leaving No Student Behind

It is your second year as a teacher in the Lincoln East school district. Over the last 4 years, the number of students from immigrant families has increased dramatically in your school. In your class, you have two students who speak Somali, one Hmong, one Farsi, and four Spanish speakers. Some of them know a little English, but many have very few words other than "OK." If there had been more students from each of the language groups, the district would have given your school additional resources and special programs in each language, providing you extra help. But there are not quite enough students speaking most of the languages to meet the requirements. In addition, you have several students with special needs; learning disabilities, particularly problems in reading, seem to be the most common. Your state and district require you to prepare all your students for the achievement tests in the spring, and the national emphasis is on readiness for college and career by the end of high school—for everyone. Your only possible extra resource is a student intern from the local college.

CRITICAL THINKING

- What would you do to help all your students to progress and prepare for the achievement tests?
- How would you make use of the intern so that both she and your students learn?
- How could you involve the families of your non-English-speaking students and students with learning disabilities to support their children's learning?
