Sloths are furry, tree-dwelling mammals that have many interesting characteristics. For example, their fur patterns make their eyes appear sad, but makes their face look like they are smiling. Sloths are best known for other characteristics, such as their sleep pattern and movement. Sloths sleep an incredible twenty hours per day! When they finally wake, they move very slowly. They do all this to conserve energy. If you've never seen a sloth, you might think it looks scary with its long claws. However, you shouldn't be frightened. Sloths are harmless creatures that only eat plants, twigs, and leaves. If you want to see wild sloths, you can find them living in the canopy of the rainforests in Central and South America.
