Concept Development 30 2:

Mountain View Corridor, Salt Lake and Utah Counties, 2008 Early Category and Concept Development :
Making Sense of the Blooming, Buzzing Confusion David H. Rakison Assistant Professor of Psychology Carnegie Mellon University, Lisa M. Oakes Associate Professor of Psychology University of Iowa, 2003-01-09 Whether or not infants' earliest perception of the world is a blooming buzzing confusion it is not long before they come to perceive structure and order among the objects and events around them. At the core of this process and cognitive development in general is the ability to categorize to group events, objects or properties together and to form mental representations or concepts that encapsulate the commonalities and structure of these categories. Categorization is the primary means of coding experience underlying not only perceptual and reasoning processes but also inductive inference and language. The aim of this book is to bring together the most recent findings and theories about the origins and early development of categorization and conceptual abilities. Despite recent advances in our understanding of this area a number of hotly debated issues remain at the center of the controversy over categorization. Researchers continue to ask questions such as Which mechanisms for categorization are available at birth and which emerge later? What are the relative roles of perceptual similarity and nonobservable properties in early classification? What is the role of contextual variation in categorization by infants and children? Do different experimental procedures reveal the same kind of knowledge? Can computational models simulate infant and child categorization? How do computational models inform behavioral research? What is the impact of language on category development? How does language partition the world? This book is the first to address these and other key questions within a single volume. The authors present a diverse set of views representing cutting edge empirical and theoretical advances in the field. The result is a thorough review of empirical contributions to the literature and a wealth of fresh theoretical perspectives on early categorization.

The Second Handbook of Research on the Psychology of Mathematics Education Ángel Gutiérrez, Gilah C. Leder, Paolo Boero, 2016-07-23 Since its establishment in 1976 PME The International Group for the Psychology of Mathematics Education is serving as a much sought after venue for scientific debate among those at the cutting edge of the field as well as an engine for the development of research in mathematics education. A wide range of research activities conducted over the last ten years by PME members and their colleagues are documented and critically reviewed in this handbook released to celebrate the Group's 40 year anniversary milestone. The book is divided into four main sections: Cognitive aspects of learning and teaching content areas; Cognitive aspects of learning and teaching transverse areas; Social aspects of learning and teaching mathematics; and Professional aspects of teaching mathematics. The selection for each chapter of a team of at least two authors mostly located in different parts of the world ensured effective coverage of each field. High quality was further enhanced by the scrupulous review of early chapter drafts by two leaders in the relevant field. The resulting volume with its compilation of the most relevant aspects of research in the field and its emphasis on
