

General Operating Problems

NO DISPLAY — If the zone controller display remains blank after 24 vac power has been applied to the damper actuator, it is an indication that power is not reaching the zone controller.

At the damper actuator, check that 24 vac is being supplied from the power transformer. Acceptable voltage range is 22 to 30 vac.

The va requirements are:

- 20 va for dampers only. (No relay packs or pressure sensors.)
- 25 va for dampers interfaced with a relay pack or a pressure sensor.
- 30 va for dampers interfaced to both a relay pack and a pressure sensor.

Check the wiring between the 24 vac transformer and the damper actuator or replace the transformer as necessary.

At the zone controller wiring connector board, with the zone controller connected, check for approximately 10 vdc (steady) across the red and white wires from the damper actuator.

Check the continuity of the 5-conductor wire running between the zone controller wiring connector board and the damper actuator.

Check that the zone controller ribbon cable is properly seated in the wiring connector board. Disconnect, then reconnect the ribbon cable from the connector board. If the zone controller display remains blank after the ribbon cable is reconnected, use the ribbon cable wiring diagram on page 27 to check the zone controller wiring connector block and ribbon cable.

Try connecting different zone controllers. If a different zone controller works, the other zone controller is faulty. Try connecting the zone controller at the damper actuator board. If it works, the wiring from the damper actuator to the zone controller is faulty.

At the damper actuator, with the zone controller connected, check for approximately 10 vdc (steady) across the white and red wires to the zone controller. If faulty, replace the damper actuator.

BLINKING DISPLAY — If the zone controller display shows a rotating zero, or 4 zeros that are constantly displayed, it is an indication the zone controller is continuously going through the power-up sequence and cannot enter normal operating mode.

Check for any of the following conditions that would cause the display to blink or constantly display rotating zeros:

- Low voltage from the 24 vac transformer. Acceptable voltage range is 22 to 30 vac.
- Unsteady 10 vdc across the red and white wires from the damper actuator.
- The yellow or blue wire from the damper actuator to the zone controller wiring connector board is broken or disconnected.
- The zone controller ribbon cable is improperly installed or defective.
- The zone controller wiring connector board is defective. See diagram on page 27 for ribbon cable and wiring connector block troubleshooting information.
- The zone controller or damper actuator is defective.

Zone Controller Communication Problems —

Most communication problems are associated with improper configuration of the system devices, faulty wiring, or failure of a single device wired to the communication bus.

COMMON COMMUNICATION RELATED PROBLEMS

— The following are indications of communication related problems:

- A zone controller does not correctly indicate equipment fan operation, the current system mode, or time of day.
- During the communication check, the system controller associated with the zone controller fails to verify communications with the zone controller.
- The zone controller operates continuously in unoccupied or occupied modes, even though unoccupied program or local unoccupied control functions are properly configured.

COMMON CAUSES OF SYSTEM COMMUNICATION PROBLEMS

— The configuration of the network is such that one item can cause multiple problems, or one error can cover up several problems. If a problem is found, correct it and check the network for other communications problems that may appear.

1. Check the device address of the zone controller. A zone controller must have an address below the associated monitor thermostat and within the controller scanning range. See Table 10.

For additional information about addressing devices on the network, refer to the Carrier Comfort Network Installation Instructions.

2. Check the configuration of the communication related options of the system controller and each device in the problem system. Every device has one or more communication related options that could be configured incorrectly.

3. Check the zone controller mounting and cover plates for protruding screw heads or bent interior standoffs.

Protruding screw heads on the rear mounting plate can cause a short between the rear pins of the set point buttons. The zone controller can not communicate with the system controller when the set point buttons are depressed.

Bent interior standoffs could constantly press the set point buttons and block the device from communicating.

4. Check the zone controller wiring connector board for the correct network wire connections.

The red, green, and black wires must be in their proper locations. The wiring connector block is labeled to indicate the correct wiring connections. Use the ribbon cable wiring diagram on page 27 to check for a faulty ribbon cable, wiring connector board, or failed TVA (transient voltage arrester).

If the communication related problem still exists, a device on the network could be defective or the communication bus wiring may be faulty.
