Committee on Survey of Research on Crime and Criminal Justice, 1929 Wicked Ladies Gregory J. Durston, 2014-08-11 In recent years much has been published on women crime and justice in English history However for a variety of reasons particularly the ready availability of source material for the capital such research has tended to have an overwhelmingly Metropolitan focus This book aims to redress the balance for the long eighteenth century by concentrating on women from outside the London area Although vitally important to the wider country the Metropolis always contained a small minority of the country s female offenders and defendants albeit a significantly higher percentage of the latter than its share of the national population The capital also had a rather different criminal justice and policing system to that found in the rest of the country at this time The book focuses on women s experiences in provincial England as both the perpetrators of various crimes and as suspects or defendants in the country s criminal justice system The areas considered range from the West Country to the Scottish Border and the offences examined include all of the major crimes such as murder and theft as well as some more arcane forms of deviance including arson and coining The factors that prompted women to offend their likelihood of exposure when they did so and their treatment before the courts and in the penal system are all considered in detail In particular the book examines the gendered differences found in female crime when compared to that of their male counterparts and how women's experiences of the era's justice system differed from those of men. It also compares provincial women to those found in the Metropolis in these respects. Extensive use is made of primary sources in portraying the lives of female criminals from Kent to Cumberland while comparison is also made with women from other parts of the British Isles and beyond so that the respective roles of structural determinants and national culture in crime and justice can be considered.
