

THE RED RODS

The Red Rods help the child to recognize differences in size in one dimension—length. Again, the child must place the rods in the proper sequence from the shortest which is ten centimeters in length to the longest which is one meter in length. The exercise is similar to the preceding ones in that a mistake in the order is very evident to the child and can be corrected easily. It also offers the teacher the opportunity of introducing to the child the terms, short, shorter, shortest and long, longer, longest. This equipment gives the child a sensorial basis for learning to count when she begins mathematics.

THE SMELLING JARS

The smelling material consists of two sets of small jars with removable caps. These jars are identical in all respects except the flavoring that they contain. One has cinnamon, another mint, another coffee, another cloves, etc. Each jar has a significant fragrance.

The food is covered by cheesecloth or a perforated top so that the child can smell it, but she can't see or feel it. Each jar in the first set has a mate in the second set. The child combines the pairs by carefully smelling each jar. The teacher uses this exercise as an opportunity to build the child's vocabulary by teaching her the names of the foods she is smelling.

In a parallel exercise, children smell cotton dampened with drops of liquids such as perfume, vanilla and vinegar. Many teachers follow up this exercise by having the children carefully smell flowers in the school garden. Some children, wearing a blindfold, learn to identify many of the flowers by their fragrance.
