Global Climate Change

Why is global climate important? In the last 400 years, the temperature of the globe surface is rising. The consequences of global climate change are now evident because the temperature current increases more and more every day. The earth present changes in precipitation, arctic sea ice and atmospheric moisture also the rate of recurrence and intensity of extreme weather conditions. However, global climate changes are outcome of natural causes like volcanoes and human activities like pollution. Global climate change is a grave problem that might call for to be solvent by the governments and companies that produce pollution.

A global climate change is a serious problem to affect the environment. In the last decades the population grown quickly, so those people consume more natural resources. Citizens are using the land for farm that have a considerable impact on the forests. Farmers destroy the rain forest to raise crops as a result the land is erosion. Deforestation produces more carbon dioxide, and it concentrates in the atmosphere. Emissions of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere contribute to changes in global trends. For example, Brazil has the greatest concern about climate change that can have significant impacts on tropical forests because the continuation deforestation ( Fearnside).

The concentration of greenhouses gases is increasing. These gases allow to global warming continues and has a result of these natural disasters are more frequently like hurricanes earthquake, also the melting of polar ice caps also contributes to higher sea levels, in addition these disasters have an economic consequence around the word. Another effect is animals lose their habitat. They can't adapt the habitat that changes and the lack of food product of deforestation.

Most people are thinking in use the sun's energy instead fossil fuel. That sound great but in the other hand solar panels are difficult to installed on a rooftop surface or ground, in fact the cost of these panels are high and only rich people can afford it. Additionally, this technology is available only in a few countries, so the developing nations probably haven't access to that.

An excellent solution to global climate problem is a collaboration of governments together. They need to implement long term plan to reduce the greenhouse gases to get into the atmosphere, this could be possible with a recycle, that can reduce deforestation because don't need curt trees to produce paper or reusing plastic. Recycle can save energy and the environment. Besides, governments can implement a reforestations plan and should reduce the carbon dioxide. In additions the companies who produce pollutions must need to collaborate with solutions to reduce global warming, reducing energy use fossil fuel or other activities that cause global climate problems.

In conclusion, Global climate change is a problem that affects all of us. We all need come together governments,
