Answers to Questions 1–4

1. D Specimens for fungal culture must be kept in a moist, sterile environment. Swabs that are dried out or submitted with insufficient material on them should be rejected. Generally, swabs are inadequate for the recovery of fungi because they are easily contaminated by surrounding skin flora.
2. A A solution of 10% KOH is used for contaminated specimens, such as skin, nail scrapings, hair, and sputum, to clear away background debris that may resemble fungal elements. Normally sterile specimens (CSF, blood, and bone marrow) do not require KOH for clearing.
