

Case Study 7: A project using Systematic Concept Teaching (SCT) with special education students diagnosed as having moderate to severe language and learning deficits in an elementary school in Washington State

By Kelly Morgan

Introduction

Beginning in the 2010–2011 school year and continuing to date, I undertook a pilot project to systematically teach Basic Conceptual Systems and their related Basic Concepts utilizing the principles and structures of the Concept Teaching Model (CTM) to implement Systematic Concept Teaching (SCT) with specific groups of children in the North Kitsap School District of Washington State who demonstrated moderate to severe language and learning difficulties. This project was not a formal evaluation study per se, but a replicative implementation that has resulted in some additional qualitative data in relation to the impact of SCT, cf. the previously reported research on effects of SCT. The initial goal of the project was to see if the development of learning, language and thinking skills seen in previous implementations of SCT could be duplicated with a mixed population of English-speaking students with intensive intervention needs as a result of cognitive, academic, language, motor and/or social deficits. The majority of research on CTM and SCT had been implemented with Norwegian speaking students.

This project initially began with the teaching of Basic Conceptual Systems (BCSs) (Color, Shape, Size, Position, Place, (Surface) Pattern, Direction, Number, Time, etc.) and their related Basic Concepts (BCs) based on the principles of the Concept Teaching Model and Systematic Concept Teaching proposed by the late Professor Magne Nyborg of Norway and later expanded by Dr. Andreas Hansen. Two groups of students were the initial targets of this pilot study – a group of Kindergarten and a group of First Grade students. These students had all been diagnosed by the school district as having intensive intervention needs as a result of cognitive, academic, language, motor and/or social deficits and were taught in a combination of pull-out services in an Intensive Support Program (ISP) classroom and inclusive services provided in their age-appropriate Kindergarten or First Grade classroom. These initial groups were targeted with the teaching of Basic Conceptual Systems (BCSs) and their related Basic Concepts in small group sessions in the context of their ISP classroom and, as they moved into higher grades, with work on Analytic Coding in small group sessions in the context of their ISP classroom or in individual sessions in the Speech Therapy setting.

At the end of year 2 (the second school year) of the pilot program, this work was expanded to include the following additional student groups: 1) each new group of Kindergarten aged students that received language support in the ISP, 2) continued support for each group of ISP students who had previously received SCT as a Kindergarten or First Grade student, but were now in 2nd through 5th Grades and still qualified for language support and, 3) students receiving language support for language-learning disabilities in the Resource Room Program (A less intensive pull-out model for students with specific language-learning disabilities in the areas of reading, written language and/or math). This latter group received targeted teaching of BCSs and their related BCs together with work on Analytic Coding in individual sessions rather than in small groups in their Resource Room program. The project was expanded after just two years due to the fact that the majority of students involved in the initial project made such significant growth in both their thinking skills and oral approach this basic text for administration and supervision of special education programs presents principles and examples of leadership and administration in field based contexts Taking on a Learning Disability Erin McCloskey, 2012-08-01 In the United States approximately 2.5 million students are diagnosed as having a learning disability and the majority of those children are placed in special education because of an inability to read as expected. As a result of this diagnosis these children may be placed in special education classrooms classrooms that are separate from the mainstream population. For children with learning disabilities there is likely no place other than in school where a student's inability to read as expected leads to this separation from his/her peers. Once school is over these children play alongside the kids in their neighborhoods participate in sports teams and attend community activities. This book looks at the impact of being labeled as learning disabled and separated from peers in school through the eyes of Samson a middle school student described both as learning disabled and a non reader. This qualitative case study explores how Samson his family his teachers and this researcher make sense of special education and the complexities of learning to read as an adolescent. Throughout this book there is a contrasting of the laws and procedures designed to guide special education with the actual experiences of those impacted by these laws and procedures. Through the three years that Samson was in middle school this book investigates his perspective on his classes his interpretation of what it means to be a student in special education and the process by which he learns to read. How disability gets created contested and discussed is highlighted through the many contexts that allow disability to be recognized and to fade into the background. The Case for Education Peter Desberg, Joel A. Colbert, Kimberly D.

Trimble, 1996 Special Educational Needs in the Early Years Ruth Wilson, 2003-10-04 This title is a practical and accessible guide to teaching young children with special educational needs. At the heart of the book is the belief that the focus should be on the child as an active learner rather than on their disability. Practical Cases in Special Education for All Educators Mary Konya Weishaar, Victoria Groves Scott, 2005-06 Practical Cases in Special Education for all Educators focuses in on how general educators can and should become active participants in the education of children who have disabilities by providing students with much needed practical applications of how general and special educators must work together and become involved in the education of all children. Chapter 1 explains the Case Study Approach of the text and provides a sample case and framework for the rest of the text. Each following chapter is categorically based on a specific disability and presents two in depth cases which are written as first person stories from various school professionals parents and students. Once the characteristics associated with particular disabilities are discussed and identified the text goes on to explore how educators used applied theory and problem solving skills to craft a practical solution for each scenario. Chapter Opening Case Coding Boxes informs the reader of the type of case that they will be presented with as well as the grade level of the student in the case. A List of Characters that readers will meet in the case are presented at the beginning of each case. Questions to Ponder appear within each case after the first main section to give students a place to reflect on the premise.

before delving more deeply into the story Case Study Framework Questions appear at the end of each case to help students further explore and analyze the information presented in the case These questions do not always have a right or wrong answer Thinking Critically about the Case are questions included at the end of each case that ask students to think critically about what they have read The questions in this section requires summarization and evaluation Activities at the end of each case give students an assignment to do in or outside of class to further their exploration of each case Resources for Further Investigation conclude each case chapter and give students print and web based resources to explore Appendix Individual Education Plan Drafting Activities and Templates provides several valuable sample IEP templates that students can use as part of their assignments to get practice creating IEPs Matrix of cases appears at the end of the text and offers a listing of all the cases broken out by type of case disability category and age grade level

Disability, Culture, and Development Misa Kayama, Wendy Haight, 2013-09-04 This book examines Japanese cultural beliefs about disability and related socialization practices as they impact the experiences of elementary school aged children Physical and mental conditions which impair children s functioning are universal issues impacting child welfare and educational systems around the world While the American approach is well understood and represented in the literature cultures differ in which physical and mental conditions are considered disabling Currently the Japanese educational system is in transition as public schools implement formal special education services for children with developmental disabilities Developmental disabilities is a new term used by Japanese educators to categorize a variety of relatively minor social and cognitive conditions caused by neurologically based deficits learning disabilities such as dyslexia ADHD and Asperger s Syndrome Children who were once considered difficult or slow learners are now considered to be disabled and in need of special services This transition created an excellent opportunity to explore Japanese beliefs about disability that might otherwise have remained unexamined by participants and how these evolving beliefs and new socialization and educational practices impact children s experiences
