Parkinson's disease PD is a priority in biomedical research and a pre requisite to improve early disease diagnosis and ultimately to developing disease modifying strategies In the past decade and a half geneticists have identified several genes that are involved in the molecular pathogenesis of PD They not only identified gene variants segregating with familial forms of PD but also genetic risk factors of sporadic PD via genome wide association studies GWAS Understanding how PD genes and their gene products function holds the promise of unraveling key PD pathogenic processes Therefore the precise cellular role of PD proteins is currently the subject of intense investigation Interestingly a number of PD proteins have enzymatic functions including kinase GTPase or ATPase functions In the context of understanding disease pathogenesis or developing disease modifying therapies enzymes possess several useful features Firstly enzymes are often key elements of cellular signaling networks acting as on off switches to determine signaling intensity For instance kinases mediate phosphorylation events which activate or inactivate their substrates while GTPases modulate activity of their effector proteins via direct interaction in a GDP GTP dependent manner ATPases also control cellular processes through their involvement in cellular energy production and or in transmembrane transport Secondly enzymes are attractive targets for therapeutics development This is exemplified by the growing number of kinase inhibitors approved for clinical use while compounds modulating GTPases or ATPases have also been proposed as potential therapeutics Finally as elements in cellular signaling networks enzymes are not generally constitutively active but subject to further regulation through additional signaling components Knowledge of how PD kinases GTPases and ATPases are activated or inactivated can aid in understanding how PD signaling networks are deregulated in disease and point to new possibilities in targeting pathological signaling processes The objective of this research topic is to provide an overview of current knowledge on the regulation of cellular signaling networks of PD kinases GTPases and ATPases Both upstream and downstream signaling events will be covered with a focus on molecular events that can readily be monitored relevance as disease biomarkers and have a potential to be modulated relevance as potential therapeutic target

A Living History of Immunology Kendall Arthur Smith, 2015-11-04 In the highly competitive world of biomedical science often the rush to publish and to be recognized as first with a new discovery concept or method is lost in the hurly burly of the moment as the maddening crowd moves on to the next new thing One of the great things about immunology today is that it has only become mature as a science within the last half century and especially within the past 35 years as a consequence of the revolution of molecular immunology which has taken place only since 1980 Consequently most of those who have contributed to our new understanding of how the immune system functions are still alive and well and still contributing Thus A Living History of Immunology collates many stories from the investigators who actually performed the experiments that have established the frontiers of immunology

Accordingly this volume combats revisionist science by those who want to alter history by telling the stories a different way than actually happened In this regard one of the good things about science vs other disciplines is that we have the written record of what was done when it was done and by whom Even so we do not have the complete story or narrative of how and why experiments were done and what made the differences that led to success This volume captures and chronicles some of these stories from the past fifty years in immunology
