Common populist spirit? A comparative analysis of Alternative for Germany (AfD) and Law and Justice (PiS) Peter König, 2020-05-19 Master's Thesis from the year 2019 in the subject Politics Other International Politics Topics grade 1 0 Warsaw University language English abstract This study sheds light upon the phenomenon of populism by comparing the parties Alternative for Germany and Law and Justice regarding a common populist spirit While the manifold understandings of populism and its origins are expounded the study applies the ideological approach of populism to further conduct a research upon the right wing populist character of both parties However both parties are not right wing populist parties in their very fundament but underwent a transformation into such through two populist moments Applying a binominal logistic regression reveals populist determinants of voting behavior for each party and thus their ideological core While a fertile breeding ground for right wing populist attitudes is given after the respective first populist moment of each party it can be shown as well that such attitudes have not been decisively influencing voting decision at that time Historical Abstracts ,1992 Vols 17 18 cover 1775 1914 The Expository Times ,1899 History of the Michigan Agricultural College and Biographical Sketches of Trustees and Professors William James Beal,1915
