

Chapter 22 - Darwinian View of Life

Overview of Darwin's Work

1. Descendants from an ancestral species - descent with modification
 - a. Small incremental changes over a long period of time
 2. Natural Selection is the mechanism of evolution
 - a. Populations evolve, not individuals
- Evolutionary Adaptation: result of natural selection in which an accumulation of inherited characteristics enhance an organism's ability to survive and reproduce

Pre-Darwinian Ideas

- Cuvier: paleontologist
 - Recognized discrepancy in fossil record
 - Opposed gradual evolutionary change
 - Proposed catastrophism
- Hutton: geologist
 - Proposed gradualism within context of the Earth's geological features
 - Mechanism of slow, but continuous, cumulative processes currently operating
- Lyell: geologist
 - Uniformitarianism - current mechanisms are identical to those operating in the past; at the same rate
 - Earth must be very old - necessary for Darwin
- Lamarck: naturalist
 - Life evolves as the environment changes
 - Use and Disuse: parts of the body used extensively are stronger, while those not used deteriorate
 - Inheritance of Acquired Characteristics: modifications of organisms are inherited by offspring
 - Provides insight into importance of variation and adaptation

Charles Darwin

- Darwin was a British naturalist accompanying a local survey ship, the HMS Beagle, around the world voyage
- Collected specimens and kept detailed journals regarding specific adaptations of organisms in diverse environments
- Natural selection was proposed

Galapagos Islands

- Darwin made critical observations regarding finch species of the islands:
- Many finch species existed (very similar with subtle differences)
- Species resemble those of the mainland and are found nowhere else (endemic)
- Have similar features to organisms in similar environments, though they are not closely related
- There must be a link between adaptation to the environment and the origin of new species

Darwin's Finches

- 14 known species of finches inhabiting the islands:
