

Chicago Style: Humanities

Based on The Chicago Manual of Style, 16th Edition and
A Pocket Style Manual, 7th Edition

Many humanities instructors, including those in history and the arts, require students to use the notes and bibliography system of Chicago Style. Chicago citations consist of numbered notes in the text of the paper. These notes refer the reader to either footnotes (at the bottom of the page) or endnotes (at the end of the paper) which are numbered correspondingly.

The first time a source is cited, full information is provided, including author (first name first), title, and facts of publication. These elements are separated by commas, with facts of publication in parentheses. Subsequent citations require only the last name of the author, a shortened version of the title of the work cited, and page number where applicable. In notes, the first line is indented.

Usually, a supplemental bibliography is required as well. In the bibliography, the last name of the author is listed first, elements are separated by periods rather than commas, and the facts of publication are not in parentheses. In the bibliography, lines following the first are indented.

Check with your instructor to see if he/she prefers footnotes or endnotes, and whether a bibliography is also required.

Books

Book, single author

1st note:

1. Carol Berkin, Revolutionary Mothers: Women in the Struggle for America's Independence (New York: Knopf, 2005), 157-160.

Chicago Manual Style Humanities:

The Chicago Manual of Style University of Chicago. Press,1993 Constructing Rhetorical Education David Charney, Wilma R. Ebbitt,1992 In nineteen essays illustrating its many aspects this book offers an argument for what it takes to construct a complete rhetorical education The editors take an approach that is pragmatic and pluralistic based as it is on the assumptions that a rhetorical education is not limited to teaching freshman composition or any specific writing course and that the contexts in which such an education occurs are not limited to classrooms This thought provoking volume stresses that while a rhetorical education results in the growth of writing skills its larger goal is to foster critical thinking
