Clownfish

SSOL

There is no need to be afraid of a clownfish. These four-inch fish are orange with three white stripes. They live in the reefs of oceans. They live in anemones (like in the picture). Anemones usually sting fish that get close to them. The clownfish has a special coating on their skin that protects them. The anemone helps keep the clownfish safe. The clownfish helps defend the anemone. There are 30 species of clownfish in the Red Sea and the Indian and Pacific Oceans.

Lionfish

SSOL

A lionfish is an interesting looking creature. You do not want to touch one! Lionfish have 18 fins that spread out from their striped body. These fins sting prey with venom. The venom can be deadly. Lionfish use camouflage and move quickly to stay safe. They live in the reefs of the Red Sea. They also live in the Indo-Pacific Oceans, the Western Pacific, and the Indian Ocean.

Creating the Opportunity to Learn A. Wade Boykin, Pedro Noguera, 2011-09-08 Unless we believe that those who have more are inherently superior to those who have less we should be troubled by the fact that patterns of achievement are often fairly predictable particularly with respect to students race and class In Creating the Opportunity to Learn Wade Boykin and Pedro Noguera help navigate the turbid waters of evidence based methodologies and chart a course toward closing and eliminating the academic achievement gap Turning a critical eye to current and recent research the authors present a comprehensive view of the achievement gap and advocate for strategies that contribute to the success of all children Boykin and Noguera maintain that it is possible to close the achievement gap by abandoning failed strategies learning from successful schools and simply doing more of what the research shows is most effective Success is founded on equity but equity involves more than simply ensuring students have equal access to education equity also entails a focus on outcomes and results If we want to bring about significant improvements in those outcomes we have to do more to address the context in which learning takes place In short we must create schools where a child s race or class is no longer a predictor for how well he or she might perform
