These findings, if confirmed, have important implications for the use of the 100-hour rule. The 100-hour rule is a common requirement for nursing licensure, and it is based on the assumption that 100 hours of clinical experience is sufficient to ensure that nurses are competent to practice. However, these findings suggest that the 100-hour rule may not be sufficient to ensure that nurses are competent to practice, and that additional clinical experience may be needed.
