

Monitor Comprehension

This strategy helps students monitor their comprehension or think about how well they are understanding what they are reading. Students can practice this strategy by using other strategies, such as Ask Questions, Visualization, or Make Connections.

DAY
1

Reproduce the Monitor Comprehension visual aid and distribute it to students. Then introduce the strategy to students: This week we will learn how to monitor our comprehension. When good readers read, they keep track of how well they understand what they are reading. Explain that by monitoring comprehension, students can recognize when they stop understanding something. Next, read the instructions at the top of the passage aloud. Ask: Why do we read a table of contents? (to find things in a book; to understand what a book is about; etc.) Direct students to read the table of contents and to complete the strategy practice activity. Invite volunteers to share their responses. Then direct students to complete the skill practice activity. Review the answers together.

2

Remind students of the strategy. Say: One way we monitor comprehension is to visualize, or make mental pictures in our head, as we read. Tell students to visualize what is happening in each paragraph and when they finish a paragraph to spend a moment making sure their mental image matches what is written in the passage. Read the instructions at the top of the page aloud. Then have students read the passage. When students have finished, pair them or complete the strategy practice activity as a group. Then direct students to complete the skill practice activity.

DAY 3

Remind students of the strategy. Say: One way we can monitor our comprehension is to make notes in the margin as we read or underline parts of the text we want to remember or concentrate on. Read the instructions at the top of the page aloud. Then have students read the passage. When students have finished, complete the strategy practice activity as a group. Brainstorm with students ways they can better understand the parts of the passage that they underlined (reading it again slowly; using a dictionary; asking someone for help; etc.). Then direct students to complete the skill practice activity. Review the answers together.

DAY 4

Remind students of the strategy. Say: It is often harder to monitor comprehension after reading a whole passage than it is after reading only one paragraph. Break what you are reading into smaller chunks, and stop frequently to make sure you understand what you have read. Read the instructions at the top of the page aloud. Then have students read the passage. When students have finished, complete the strategy practice activity as a group. You may wish to record students' responses on the board and augment them with other good fix-up strategies (e.g., visualizing, asking questions, reading something aloud, making notes, etc.). Direct students to complete the skill practice activity. Review the answers together.

DAY 5

Remind students of the strategy. Ask: Has your mind ever wandered while you were reading? What did you do to focus on the text again? Invite students to share their responses. Say: We can monitor our comprehension well by noticing when our attention starts to wander. Sometimes it's best to take a very short break and clear our minds to help us focus on what we are reading. Read the instructions at the top of the page aloud. Then have students read the passage. When students have finished, pair them or complete the strategy practice activity as a group. Invite volunteers to share their responses and explain how they focused their attention again. Then direct students to complete the skill practice activity. Review the answers together.
