Ian stared through his binoculars in frustration. He had been on the safari for three hours now and, apart from a small herd of zebra and some very nervous-looking gazelle, he hadn't seen any signs of life.

This was the second day the guides had brought them out in the jeep to hunt for big game (with their cameras) and it looked like it was going to be another day with no sign of any big cats. Ian felt guilty about his disappointment. After all, he had also seen elephants, giraffes and many species of bird the day before (more than most people had seen in the wild), but he was desperate for a glimpse of his favourite animal of all time, a cheetah.

His eyes drawn to a large rock to the left of the jeep, Ian refocused the binoculars. His heart stopped; there, gracefully draped over the rock, was the unmistakable shape of a cheetah! The cheetah lifted its head lazily and looked directly at Ian and the jeep, its slender tail flicking from side to side. Shaking with excitement, Ian put down his binoculars, replacing them with his camera.

This really was the holiday of a lifetime!

Why do you think the gazelle are described as nervous-looking?

They may have feared Ian and the others in the jeep or predators.
