The Sunday After Tuesday William H. Willimon, 2002 In a matter of minutes on a seemingly ordinary day at the beginning of an academic year college students who had encountered war if at all in a textbook or a bestseller or a movie found themselves staring war in the face And young adults perhaps more than middle or older adults recognized that their future was profoundly affected Across the country immediate reaction on campuses was varied as demonstrations for peace mingled with an all out willingness to go to war Over the next week walk in traffic doubled at campus counseling centers The Sunday After Tuesday gives readers an opportunity to step onto a number of college campuses and listen in as chaplains ministers pastors and priests first began to address the global issues that rose to crisis proportions on September 11 2001 These homilies and sermons written in the context of September 11 are directed to 18 to 22 year olds and attempt to relate the Christian faith to the events of the week They offer food for thought and discussion and a sense of being there with a generation that was just beginning to realize they might pay the ultimate price as world events unfold A 16 page leader's guide includes plans for a 12 session study with discussion guide

The Cyclopaedia of Wit and Humor W. E. Burton, 1870 De Homicidio Francisco de Vitoria, 1997 There are no more current topics of ethical debate than euthanasia assisted suicide and abortion more generally the taking of innocent human life as well as the morality of capital punishment Professor Doyle has made Vitoria's thorough analyses of this basic moral topic still so much debated in our own times and so central to the Catholic moral tradition available in Latin and in an accurate translation along with a brief biography and a very helpful commentary Certainly Vitoria did not say the last word on these issues Some of his opinions suffer from his historical limits For example he discusses whether the state might permit a husband to kill his adulterous wife but not whether it might permit a wife to kill an adulterous husband On a few points he seems to have changed his own mind Nevertheless the penetrating clarity of his moral reasoning is for the most part still valid and highly instructive What is especially noteworthy is that Vitoria although he had studied with the famous nominalist John Major is genuinely a Thomist not a nominalist a voluntarist or legalist Although he does not neglect the role played by positive law in moral decision he seeks always to ground his reasoning in the natural law as a participation in the Divine Law that is in the reasoned conformity of human action to the requirements of God given human nature Professor Doyle has not merely contributed to historical scholarship by this fine publication but to the solution of the grave moral problems of our times by making available to us this model of sound ethical reasoning From the Foreword by Benedict M Ashley OP STM And You Call Yourself a Christian?
