

Circulatory and Respiratory Test Study Guide Answer Key

1. What is the function of the veins? How does blood travel through this blood vessel?
  - Veins bring blood back to the heart from the body.
  - The blood goes through these vessels with a valve so it only goes one way.
  - It travels under less pressure than in the arteries.
2. What is the function of the arteries? How does blood travel through this blood vessel?
  - Arteries take blood away from the heart towards cells in the body.
  - The walls are very thick as the blood is under great pressure as it is pumped from the heart, and goes to the capillaries.
3. What is the function of the capillaries? How does blood travel through this blood vessel?
  - The capillaries surround the cells and are very thin so that materials like nutrients and gases can pass through.
  - For example as the capillary goes around the alveoli it exchanges oxygen for carbon dioxide.
4. Explain why your heart and breathing rate speeds up as you exercise.

When you exercise your muscles are using more oxygen to function so your breathing rate and heart rate increase to get the oxygen to your cells and the carbon dioxide back to your lungs.
5. What is the main function of the respiratory system? The circulatory system?
  - The respiratory system exchanges carbon dioxide which is waste for oxygen that the body needs.
  - The circulatory system sends nutrients and gases throughout the body and returns wastes to the heart.
6. What are the 4 main components of blood? Explain the function of each one.
  - Red blood cells – transport oxygen and carbon dioxide to the lungs for exchange in the alveoli.
  - White blood cells – helps the body's immune system to fight infections.
  - Platelets – help to clot the blood so bleeding slows down or stops.
  - Plasma – the liquid portion of blood, carries the cells throughout the body.
7. Describe what is happening in the alveoli during the gas exchange in your lungs. Give details. How are capillaries involved?
  - In the alveoli the oxygen leaves the lungs and enters the blood stream and the carbon dioxide leaves the blood stream and enters the lungs.
  - The capillaries are the blood stream where this gas exchange occurs.
8. If a person has a tracheotomy can they still speak? Explain why or why not.

They cannot speak since no air crosses the larynx, the vocal cords will not vibrate so no sound is produced. The tracheotomy bypasses the larynx and the air enters below this organ.
9. Describe how the respiratory and circulatory systems work together.
